White Center is evolving

PATRICK ROBINSON

White Center's makeover continues with the opening of Popeyes Louisiana Kitchen at the corner of 15th S.W. and 100th S.W.

It's the second Popeyes in the Seattle area for owner Steve Downs, who has been in the quick service restaurant business for 26 years. He came up through Burger King and eventually ran that franchise in Federal Way. He and a partner opened a Popeyes in Federal Way a few years ago. He became sole owner and began searching for real estate in Burien or White Center. When the Chevron station closed he partnered with Starbucks (now in the last stages of construction on the property) and built the Popeyes location. The build-out took an extra six weeks Downs said due to the inability to find qualified construction contractors in Seattle. Downs said the draw is, "The cajun food you can't get anywhere else.

People come for the spicy chicken, chicken tenders, red beans and rice and cajun rice and buttermilk biscuits." He emphasized that "The big thing for us is the hospitality side of it. We really try and concentrate on the service end. You'll hear one of our people say 'Good Afternoon' and the whole crew will respond 'Welcome back to Popeyes,'" the goal being to make the dining experience fun as well as tasty. Part of that is a featured beverage Strawberry soda which is a popular drink in the south said Downs.

The new location will employ 78 people Downs said, which will be a big boost for the community. The hours are 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Popeyes has 2600 locations around the world in 30 countries. Popeyes serves chicken dishes in mild and spicy flavors and offers sides such as Red Beans and Rice, Cajun fries, mashed potatoes with Cajun-style gravy, and Cajun rice. As well as fried chicken, other entree items include a chicken-and-sausage jambalaya and po' boy sandwiches.

White Center changes continuing

Just down the street on 98th S.W. Drunky Two Shoe's Bar-BQ is continuing its build-out of its outdoor area with a stage and bar set in a trailer after opening for business in May. Beer Star across the street is now fully open with Lil Woody's Burgers and Chinese Takeout restaurants part of the same structure opening soon. Southgate Roller Rink has made some changes too by expanding into the space next door (the former White Center Sign Shop) adding bar space for around 20 more people. They still serve beer and cider on Adult Nights, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday and will offer cocktails at some point in the near future. Live music is also coming to the Rink likely in late Summer.

Summer Fest was a sunny celebration with music, food and mayoral speeches

Patrick Robinson

West Seattle's Summer Fest was a sunny celebration of the community with great weather on all three days. On Friday night two bands proved to be eye openers as Purple Mane, a Prince Tribute band reproduced the Purple One's music extremely well, with the lead singer even stripping down to a purple thong near the end of their set. They were followed by headliner Thunderpussy, an all girl band that gyrated and rocked the stage harder than most people might have thought possible. On Saturday the event brought the usual mix of music with a broad range of music styles and sounds. The day was led off by West Seattle's School of Rock that had the students trading places on stage as they churned through some rock classics like the Doors "Break on Through" and Paul McCartney's "Maybe I'm Amazed." But the capper was the blistering performance of The Hives "Because I Wanna" by the students led by Nico Sound (his stage name) who brought to mind Mick Jagger before he became famous. "I just live for the audience" he said after his set.

The afternoon saw the Greenlife Stage filled to overflowing with 15 of the 21 invited Mayoral candidates taking part in what turned out to be a reasonably interesting, and at times amusing exchange of ideas. Conspicuous by her absence was the candidate leading the field in both polls and fund

Water Taxi to suspend service Aug. 7 for up to a week

The King County Water Taxi will suspend all service for up to one week starting Mon., Aug. 7 as the downtown Seattle terminal is relocated to accommodate construction of a new terminal.

During the closure, the downtown Seattle terminal will be relocated from the south side of Colman Dock/Pier 50 to the north side. When service resumes, both Water Taxi routes will use this temporary site through fall 2018 while we build a new terminal on our old site.

The new terminal, when it's finished, will also serve the new Kitsap Fast Ferries service. It's part of a larger project by the state to renovate Colman Dock.

How to get around without the Water Taxi

While service is suspended, riders are encouraged to use one or more of the following options:

Buses: Metro's Rapid Ride C Line and routes 21, 37, 55, 56, 57, 120, and 125 connect West Seattle to downtown Seattle. Route 116 connects the Fauntleroy Ferry Terminal to downtown Seattle. To accommodate extra passengers while the Water Taxi isn't running, Metro will provide added service on these routes during the closure. Also, Water Taxi shuttle routes 773 and 775 will continue to run on their regular schedules during the closure, connecting West Seattle riders to the West Seattle Junction and Alki Beach. For help planning Metro bus trips, call 206.553.3000.

Light rail: Metro Route 50 connects West Seattle to Link light rail at the SODO Station.

Telecommuting and alternate work schedules: If your employer allows you to work from home or flex your schedule to avoid peak commute times, you can both bypass and help reduce crowding on buses while the Water Taxi is out of service.

Ride sharing: Learn about Carpool, VanPool, and other ride-sharing options at www.kingcounty.gov/metro/rideshare or contact your employer.

When will the Water Taxi be back? The exact date and time depend on construction. Once we know, we'll announce them via our service alerts, on our website (www.kingcounty.gov/watertaxi), and on our Instagram feed. We'll also inform media in our service areas. You can subscribe to Water Taxi service alerts on our website.

When the Water Taxi resumes service after its move to the north side of Colman Dock, the West Seattle route will be on a new schedule. This will reflect the extra time it takes to board and de-board a growing number of West Seattle riders, and extra time needed because our route will now cross that of Washington State Ferries arriving and departing from Colman Dock.

Sleepless near Seattle? Residents tired of airplane noise

By Lindsay Peyton

David Clark recently bought a home in Des Moines, a decision he already regrets. "I was not aware of the issues," he said. "I'm screwed."

The lifelong economist and city and environmental planner thought he had done his due diligence while searching for a home—but still wasn't aware of a monolithic problem.

Clark's house is directly under the third runway flightpath of the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport.

"I can't sleep at night," he said. "My lungs burn regularly."

And he's not alone.

Clark was one of a handful of concerned citizens and elected officials who met with Port of Seattle Commissioner John Creighton at Burien Press on Fri., July 14.

Creighton has been lending an ear to residents from across King County—stopping at neighborhood coffee shops to learn about constituents' concerns.

Guests at his event in Burien on Friday had a whole lot to say about the rising amount of noise and air pollution at the growing airport.

JC Harris, who is running for city council in Des Moines, said the Port should take greater responsibility for protecting the residents in the airport's neighboring communities.

"It's a bit late in the game to come up with directives," he said. "You'll never be able to make Des Moines what it was. A new generation of people will move in and accept it for what it is now. They'll never see it as it was, beautiful and quiet."

SeaTac resident Kent Palosaari said that, while noise pollution is a major concern, his real fear is the effect of emissions from the planes on the health of area residents, especially children.

"I watch where my daughter plays and wonder, is it an open space? Are there planes overhead?" he said.

He encourages Port officials to consider their moral obligation over their legal ones.

"There's a lot you can get away with legally," he said. "But when you're talking about children's health, this is inexcusable."

Burien councilmember Debi Wagner also attended the coffee meeting with Creighton. She wrote the book "Over My Head," about her fight against local airport expansion.

Wagner said studies show that, in the flight paths, higher occurrences of brain, lung and breast cancer have been recorded—as well as higher rates of hospitalization for children with lung-related illnesses.

"Not only are we harmed by all the pollutants over our heads, but we're also sleep-deprived," she said. "It's torture."

Wagner said that while the Port may extol its efforts in economic development for the area, it does not account for the loss of property values, health effects and loss of tax base.

"To me, it's criminal," she said.

Creighton believes that going out into the community and listening to his constituents is one step forward.

"In the past, we wondered how we could work with cities around the airport to make sure the economic prosperity generated by the airport was shared," he said. "But that should not negate our responsibility in terms of environmental or neighborhood impacts."

Creighton added that even the Port was "caught off guard by the rapid growth we had in the past few years."

"Hearing from residents who are impacted by operations puts a human side to policy making," he said. "We're a public

A TRIBUTE TO RICHARD LIMMER

It is high time we gave tribute to your local hero, Richard (Dick) Limmer. He lives right here in Burien and has spent many years giving pleasure to his community.

He was the person that we all look forward to seeing... the postman. He walked so many thousands of miles, delivering the letters, that nature finally cried "Enough!". His ankles and feet were worn out, making it hard for him to walk.

But that did not stop Dick. He turned to his garden, and grew flowers galore! Then he began to share them with his fellow classmate at Alex's Enhance Fitness class for those over 50, held at Burien Community Center.

He spends hours, picking, counting, and putting them into bunches or five or six flowers, then the carefully wraps the ends of the stems with wet paper and cellophane, and an elastic band to keep the flowers drinking in transportation. Then he stands the bunches upright in a huge bucket, and takes it to class. Everybody gets to go home with lovely bunch of flowers. Daffodils to brighten the gloom of winter, followed by Tulips of numerous varieties. And he always makes sure that the front desk has a beautiful display.

Dick was born in 1935 on March 18th, a Pisces, who are known for their artistic genius. Everyone at the Community Center, and the rest of the community in Burien, want to say "Thank you..Thank you," to Dick, For you are a Jolly Good Fellow, as nobody can deny!

Will fast ferries mean economic benefit for Kitsap County?

By Shane Harms

What happens to Puget Sound communities once a 20 to 30 minute ferry to downtown Seattle is offered? Well, Bremerton, Kingston and Southworth are about to find out as Kitsap County unveiled the first of three fast ferries connecting the county to Seattle.

Kitsap Transit's new fast ferry service connecting Bremerton and Seattle started last Monday running weekdays and Saturdays. The new Rich Passage 1, a 78-foot speedy catamaran, has 118 seats for passengers and 88 of those seats can be reserved ahead of time, the rest are for walk-up riders. And the fare for the one-way 28-minute trip on the ferry will cost $12, however passengers ride free until August 1 when pass sales will be offered.

"This is the heart of maritime innovation in Kitsap County and we are so excited that the citizens of Kitsap County are taking another step forward in uniting our great state," said Governor Jay Inslee at the ceremony on Wednesday.

"This is one of the highest-tech ferries ever invented—it's going to travel at 38 to 40 knots through Rich Passage with minimal wake, it is a high-tech solution to a growth problem in Puget Sound. ... And I look forward to the day when people can have reduced housing costs, who might be working in Seattle, or spending a half an hour commuting, and getting a very reasonably-priced waterfront property in Kitsap County—isn't that a great vision?"

RP1 was built with an "ultra low wake" design specifically for passenger ferry service between Bremerton and Seattle, according to All American Marine, builders of the vessel. The water craft was built "specifically for low wake research purposes with the objective of creating an ultra-low wake energy hull design that can be used for high speed passenger transport applications operating on wake-sensitive routes," All American Marine reports. The vessel is made of aluminum and composite, capable of reaching a top speed of 37 knots, with a cruising speed of 29 knots.

The fast ferry is operated by Kitsap Transit and is funded after Kitsap voters approved a three percent sales tax increase in 2016. The fast ferry is planned in order to cut travel time by half. The Bremerton connection is the first of three fast ferries planned by Kitsap Transit with a Kingston and Seattle connection in 2018 and Southworth and Seattle in 2020.

However, the ferries are expected to do more than cut travel time, there is also speculation that the routes will bring economic benefit to Kitsap County communities by giving another housing option to people being priced out of Seattle. Essentially, the fast ferry creates a less than 30-minute commute to Seattle from communities with median home price of $297,700 (NW Multiple Listing Service). Compared to King County's median home price of $625,000 and Seattle's $722,250, to some in Seattle it appears homebuyers are claiming a stake in the old navy town. According to the NWMLS, there has been an up-tick in purchases in Bremerton since March of 2017, and with interest in the area, real estate brokers are taking notice.

Clinton Fink is a managing broker with Windermere Bellevue Commons and has been selling real estate in the area for 18 years. He said that it's not surprising that buyers are looking for alternative areas in the region as prices in Seattle continue to rise.

"The housing inventory is low, which is making a high demand and lots of people are getting priced out, so they are looking to the outlier areas," said Fink.

With thousands of people moving to Seattle each month, many Seattleites are considering their commute options, and many of them are renters according to the Wagner report.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau average travel time to work in the United States is 25.4 minutes. A 2013 study by the Wagner School at NYU examining commute times using census data in growing metropolitan areas reported that Seattle is the third fastest growing city for long distance commutes. For residents in the Seattle downtown areas commute times were 24.4 minutes but in Ballard and West Seattle they were 26 to 27 minutes.

Meanwhile, according to the United States Census Bureau the average gross rent in Bremerton was $1,034 in 2015. So

Shane Harms

Rich Passage 1 and the four other catamaran vessels are carrying the hope of economic benefit for Kitsap CoFerry 4: Ferry coming from Bremerton currently takes 1 hour and 10 minutes. The new Rich Passage 1 takes 28 minutes.

as Fink said about people looking to outlier areas for lower prices, it's speculated that more renters will find their way to Bremerton, just 28 minutes from downtown Seattle.

Still, others are skeptical. Pat Middlebrook moved to Bremerton in the early eighties. He later went to Washington State University in Pullman. Then he moved to San Diego and eventually Phoenix. Now he takes the ferry to Bremerton when he visits his mother.

Even with the faster ferries it's not going to change anything in "Bummerton" (Bremerton)," said Middlebrook.

"There's nothing happening here but a navy shipyard, and I don't see that changing anytime soon."

However, Kitsap County remains optimistic. The County estimates an economic benefit of $7.5 million in annual travel savings and approximately $1.8 million in greater employment opportunities for Kitsap residents, while improving business opportunities. They also anticipate a real estate benefit of nearly $10 million.

Look to Westside Seattle as this story develops.

Now it's personal: Lawsuit names SeaTac city attorneys, council members and former Mayor

By Patrick Robinson

The ongoing saga of the legal battle between the City of SeaTac and K&S Development took a dramatic turn this past week when K&S (owned by Gerry and Kathy Kingen who also own Salty's Seafood Grills in West Seattle, Redondo and Portland) took the fight to the next level. The original case, won by K&S resulted in an 18.3 million dollar award, the largest such settlement in state history. The case is on appeal.

Kingen said he has had to put on hold a variety of upgrades, improvements and development (including the construction of a West Seattle waterfront hotel adjacent to Salty's), all work that would bring jobs to the area, because of the millions of dollars he has had to spend in pursuit of a just outcome in the case.

Seeking some final positive resolution and the recovery of the legal fees incurred so far, the Kingens and their company named individuals associated with the city in a new lawsuit.

In a statement K&S and their attorneys said:

"K&S Development has individually sued public and elected officials of the City of SeaTac for their role in deceptively and unlawfully taking the SeaTac Center from K&S for millions less than the property's true value. In its Complaint, filed with the federal district court for the Western District of Washington, K&S has sued City Attorney Mary Bartolo and Assistant City Attorney Mark Johnson for their role in the city's deception. K&S also named former mayor Gene Fisher and current council members Tony Anderson and Pam Fernald.

This new lawsuit stems from a three-month King County trial where a jury found the city liable for having improperly used its powers to prevent K&S from developing its property into a viable park-and-fly commercial garage. The jury found city officials engaged in abuse of power, fraud and other subterfuge, including the use of a "phantom buyer," to force K&S to relinquish ownership of the SeaTac property to advance their own development plans or, in the case of Mayor Fisher, to run out the Somali immigrants from his neighborhood.

Besides the jury's verdict, King County Superior Court Judge Richard McDermott independently found city officials had broken promises and engaged in countless deceptive acts. He entered a judgement against the city for over $18,000,000 in damages. With interest, the city now owes K&S over $20,300,000.

Before entering final judgment, Judge McDermott blasted the city for what he found to be serious breaches of the trust and a pattern of deception:

[T]he city engaged in a pattern of deception that lasted years.... A government entity owes a duty of honesty and transparency to those people to whom they deal with.... There are all kinds of cases in this state which uniformly say that governments have to be open, honest, and straightforward in their dealings with everybody because that's their job.... They represent us. And because of that, they have a duty of

CHAT LINE ROMANCE TURNS VIOLENT

Officers received a call about shots fired around 12:30 a.m. on Fri., July 7 and were dispatched to the 4300 block of 30th Avenue S.W. to check it out. The caller said an unknown suspect shot him through his front door and then fled the area. The victim explained that he was chatting with a woman on an adult chat line. She sent him a photo and asked if he wanted her to come visit. He said yes, but she did not show up. So, he erased her messages. Later, a different woman from the photo arrived at his house and demanded money. When he said that he did not have any, she drew a handgun and pointed it at him. He reaffirmed that he did not have cash and asked her to leave. As she made her way out, she fired a shot through the front door. The man was not injured. The victim did not want to make a statement. He said the suspect was in her 20s, about 5'10" tall and heavy-set. Officers recovered the shell casing in front of the residence and placed it into evidence.

The witness saw the victim sleeping on a bench outside of the library when a man walked up and chucked a rock at his face. She said the suspect did not say anything prior to the attack. She described the suspect as being in his 60s, about 6'4" with red or blonde hair and wearing a black t-shirt and blue jeans. ### SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS FAN BREAKS INTO CAR, GETS ARRESTED

A man linked to a series of car prowls in Ballard was finally arrested last Monday, July 10.

Police were tipped off after a 29-year-old woman called police Monday morning when she found the back window of her Honda Accord shattered. The car was parked in a garage at the 2400 block of N.W. Market Street.

Surveillance video shows a man covered in a San Francisco Giants flag break into the car and run off with the woman's cosmetic tools she used for work. He left behind a tire iron.

agency and we need to be responsible to the public. As evidenced by the discussion today, we haven't done a good job."

Creighton said the Port's power to make changes is limited by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"But that shouldn't be a constant excuse," he said.

He recommended forming an advisory commission of citizens.

Harris has been disappointed by the Port's efforts so far.

"We feel like you're the economic engine, but we're the tailpipe," Harris said. "Nobody in my area had any idea. It's like there was an all-you-can-eat buffet called Des Moines and you sucked up the entire town."

Sheila Brush is another Des Moines resident who is fed up with airport noise. She founded the community group, Quiet Skies Puget Sound.

She said the constant buzz from overhead has kept her up for days at a time.

"I'm so tired, and that's what got me going," she said.

Brush has lived in Des Moines for 18 years. In the past few months, she said the number of arrivals and departures has greatly increased.

"From midnight to 6 a.m., there's not one break," she said. "It never stops. This is what it's been like for months, and there's no end in sight. People are not sleeping. This is dangerous. People are going to get sick."

Quiet Skies Puget Sound is preparing a survey so more residents of SeaTac, Des Moines, Federal Way and Burien can share their experiences.

In the meantime, she said her group's slogan is "Hearing it? Breathing it? Report it."

Residents can report by calling 206.787.5393 or emailing noiseabatement@portseattle.org.

For more information about Quiet Skies Puget Sound, visit www.quietskiespuget-sound.org or follow the group on Facebook at www.facebook.com/groups/QuietSkiesPugetSound/.

City of SeaTac guilty of economic brutality by refusing to fairly settle suit

K&S Development has individually sued public and elected officials of the City of SeaTac for their role in deceptively and unlawfully taking the SeaTac Center from K&S for millions less than the property's true value. In its Complaint, filed with the federal district court for the Western District of Washington, K&S has sued City Attorney Mary Bartolo and Assistant City Attorney Mark Johnson for their role in the City's deception. K&S also named former mayor Gene Fisher and current council members Tony Anderson and Pam Fernald.

This new lawsuit stems from a three-month King County trial where a jury found the City liable for having improperly used its powers to prevent K&S from developing its property into a viable park-and-fly commercial garage. The jury found City officials engaged in abuse of power, fraud and other subterfuge, including the use of a "phantom buyer," to force K&S to relinquish ownership of the SeaTac property to advance their own development plans or, in the case of Mayor Fisher, to run out the Somali immigrants from his neighborhood.

Besides the jury's verdict, King County Superior Court Judge Richard McDermott independently found City officials had broken promises and engaged in countless deceptive acts. He entered a judgement against the City for over $18,000,000 in damages. With interest, the City now owes K&S over $20,300,000.

Before entering final judgment, Judge McDermott blasted the City for what he found to be serious breaches of the trust and a pattern of deception:

[T]he City engaged in a pattern of deception that lasted years.... A government entity owes a duty of honesty and transparency to those people to whom they deal with.... There are all kinds of cases in this state which uniformly say that governments have to be open, honest, and straightforward in their dealings with everybody because that's their job.... They represent us. And because of that, they have a duty of honesty and transparency. The City violated that duty so many times I've lost count[...].... [T]he worst thing about this case is the actions of the City and how dishonest they were, and I find that to be completely and totally unacceptable.

With regard to the City officials, in particular the City Attorney's Office, the judge stated:

[Cities] have a duty of honesty and transparency.... The period of deception even lasted through their answer in the public records request.... Why? Well, the City obviously had something to hide. So I find --- as someone who works for the government, I find this to be the worst thing about this case is the actions of the City and how dishonest they were, and I find that to be completely and totally unacceptable. I don't know how the jury felt about it, but I can only suspect that was probably one of the reasons why they awarded the damages they did, because they felt the same way I did.

But there is certainly some evidence to suggest that during the course of the negotiations with K&S the City Attorney's Office participated in this profound and unacceptable pattern of deception. That violates the rules of professional conduct. That is totally and completely unacceptable to this court, and it should be to any court. Lawyers have rules that they have to abide by, and the very first rule of being a lawyer is to be honest, to not allow the client to dictate dishonesty. That was not complied with in this case. I have never filed a complaint against a lawyer, but I would seriously recommend that you take some advantage to do that, counsel, because that can't be allowed to exist.... That lawyer should be disciplined. We don't do that. Lawyers don't do that. We are held to a higher standard of care, and for us to disregard that and to allow our clients to dictate the terms of our performance is unacceptable. The City appealed the jury's verdict and the Judge's ruling to the Washington Court of Appeals. That appeal is pending.

However, because of the judge's condemnation of the city officials, and because these officials refuse to have the City to pay the judgment, K&S has chosen to sue those public officials directly responsible for the City's misconduct.

K&S's owner, Gerry Kingen, states: "A city only acts through its public officials. The officials named in this new lawsuit were the ones who caused the City to violate our legal rights. Because many of those same officials continue to use their power to cause the City not to pay what a jury and judge said was owed, I am compelled to pursue my claims directly against the responsible officials."

raising, Jenny Durkan. No explanation was offered. The candidates had little time to offer thoughts in depth since they had just an hour to introduce themselves, make simple policy statements and respond to questions. The event was less of a debate than an opportunity for many of those attending to put a face to a name and get a sense of what they represented.

In attendance were Gary Brose, Casey Carlisle, Jessyn Farrell, Michael Harris, Bob Hasegawa, Lewis A. Jones, Harley Lever, Mary J. Martin, Mike McGinn, James W. Norton Jr. Larry Oberto, Nikkita Oliver, Jason Roberts, Alex Tsimermann. Missing were Jenny Durkan, Thom Gunn, Dave Kane, Cary Moon and Keith J. Whiteman.

The headliners for Saturday night Brent Amaker and the Rodeo did not disappoint. They had the usual blend of smoke, humor, burlesque and powerful western rhythms but this time they added an extensive laser light show that at times formed a ceiling of light over the band creating a kind of intimate club atmosphere... if you can believe it, out of light. The crowd roared its approval of the eclectic cowboy music show.

Presentation by 'Silent-Film Music Guru' benefits Admiral Theater mural restoration

'Timothy Brock Returns to West Seattle with Music of the Silent Giants' on July 25

Restoration of the art-deco underwater murals of West Seattle's Historic Admiral Theater will get another boost this summer with a one-night presentation by a West Seattle native whose orchestral scores for classic movies of the pre-sound era have earned him the title of the "Silent Film Music Guru."

The event is called "Timothy Brock Returns to West Seattle with Music of the Silent Giants."

It will take place at 6:45 p.m. Tues., July 25, 2017, at the Historic Admiral Theater, 2343 California Ave. S.W., sponsored by the Southwest Seattle Historical Society.

This exciting evening—to last more than three hours, with an intermission—will start with Timothy Brock being interviewed by his childhood friend, West Seattle's Dave Beck, a host at KING-FM and longtime former KUOW-FM host. Brock will reminisce with Beck about their West Seattle upbringing and discuss the fascinating process of scoring silent classics. (Brock earned the label of "Silent-Film Music Guru" from Vogue magazine in May 2016.)

Interspersed will be stills and clips from silent films that Brock has scored. Following an intermission, Brock will introduce the screening of the Chaplin feature "Modern Times," for which Brock has restored and re-recorded the original 1936 Chaplin score.

Tickets are $20, and proceeds will go to the Historic Admiral Theater mural restoration led by the Southwest Seattle Historical Society. A VIP opportunity, to attend the presentation and visit one-on-one with Brock and Beck beforehand, will begin at 5:30 p.m. at the theater. VIP tickets are $100.

You can purchase tickets online at www.retrievertickets.com/rt/?theaterID=9383456, or at the door. Advance ticket purchases are encouraged, as the event may sell out.

Timothy Brock, who has long lived in Bologna, Italy, is internationally renowned for his orchestral scores for the movies of Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton and many other silent film classics. Over 30 years, he has composed 27 original scores for silent films, and he has served as the film restorer for the Chaplin estate since 1998. Brock also conducts symphonies in live performances of his scores to accompany presentations of silent films all over the world.

This month Brock is making a rare return to his boyhood community, where, as a 10-year-old in the early 1970s, he watched organ-accompanied silent films at West Seattle's beloved Granada Theater south of The Junction and drew the initial inspiration for his career, which he labels a "lifelong dream." (The Granada was razed in 1977.)

To see Brock discuss this West Seattle-based inspiration, visit www.youtube.com/watch?v=MWUT2n6X8Rk (time code 1:20-1:50).

Brock's mother is Berlena Brock, former board member of the Southwest Seattle Historical Society.

This unique presentation on July 25 will be the second event this summer to benefit the historical society's fund to restore the auditorium murals of the Historic Admiral Theater. The first event, a screening of the local documentary "Legends of the Road," drew 200 people to the theater and raised more than $5,000 for the fund.

The murals date to 1942, when the Portola Theater was converted and expanded to the Admiral Theater. They were covered by curtains when the theater was twinned in 1973 and uncovered as part of the theater's recent renovation to four screens.

The Historic Admiral Theater became an official Seattle landmark in 1989, following a campaign led by the Southwest Seattle Historical Society.

More information about Brock is available at his website, www.timothybrock.com.

The candle-lit lantern ceremony begins at 8:30 p.m.. ## WSOBITUARIES

Ronald William Larsen
May 29, 1948 - March 26, 2017

Ron sailed over the horizon to his Lord after a short, courageous battle with cancer. Born in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, he lived in the Seattle area most of his life, retiring from Global Diving and Salvage in 2016. His positive, helpful, friendly manner won him many friends and we will all miss him greatly. Ron was a multi-talented man--mechanic, race car enthusiast, pilot, captain, boxer, square-dancer, and a fixer-of anything broken. Beloved husband of Yvonne; loving father to Jesse, Austin and Heidi Larsen, and Halle Werner (Rich); silly grandfather to Madilin, Jackson, and Morgan Werner; dear brother to Jan Topalanchik (Mike) and Jeri Graham (John); fond uncle to many nieces, nephews, grandnieces, and grandnephews; and a warm-hearted brother-in-law. He was preceded in death by his father Robert Larsen, brother Rob Larsen, and mother Charlotte Strynadka. We love you Ron!

honesty and transparency. The city violated that duty so many times I've lost count[...] ... [T]he worst thing about this case is the actions of the city and how dishonest they were, and I find that to be completely and totally unacceptable."

With regard to the city officials, in particular the City Attorney's Office, the judge stated: [Cities] have a duty of honesty and transparency.... The period of deception even lasted through their answer in the public records request.... Why? Well, the city obviously had something to hide. So I find—as someone who works for the government, I find this to be the worst thing about this case is the actions of the city and how dishonest they were, and I find that to be completely and totally unacceptable. I don't know how the jury felt about it, but I can only suspect that was probably one of the reasons why they awarded the damages they did, because they felt the same way I did.

But there is certainly some evidence to suggest that during the course of the negotiations with K&S the City Attorney's Office participated in this profound and unacceptable pattern of deception. That violates the rules of professional conduct. That is totally and completely unacceptable to this court, and it should be to any court. Lawyers have rules that they have to abide by, and the very first rule of being a lawyer is to be honest, to not allow the client to dictate dishonesty. That was not complied with in this case. I have never filed a complaint against a lawyer, but I would seriously recommend that you take some advantage to do that, counsel, because that can't be allowed to exist.... That lawyer should be disciplined. We don't do that. Lawyers don't do that. We are held to a higher standard of care, and for us to disregard that and to allow our clients to dictate the terms of our performance is unacceptable."

The city appealed the jury's verdict and the Judge's ruling to the Washington Court of Appeals. That appeal is pending.

However, because of the judge's condemnation of the city officials, and because these officials refuse to have the city to pay the judgment, K&S has chosen to sue those public officials directly responsible for the city's misconduct.

K&S's owner, Gerry Kingen, states: "A city only acts through its public officials. The officials named in this new lawsuit were the ones who caused the city to violate our legal rights. Because many of those same officials continue to use their power to cause the city not to pay what a jury and judge said was owed, I am compelled to pursue my claims directly against the responsible officials."

Westside Seattle attempted to reach the individuals named in the new lawsuit but got no response. If statements are issued from the parties involved, this story will be updated.

Today's Answers

The Silence of the Ma'ams

JEAN GODDEN

When I was growing up reading comics like Spider-Man and Wonder Woman, they shushed us and said that children should be seen and not heard. Today there's a twist on that old saying. Women—many of them wonderful—are struggling with a gender version of “seen not heard.”

We are seeing rooms, filled with our countrymen—overwhelmingly white men—trying to silence, interrupt or ignore women. Examples of the silencing of women abound.

The phenomenon became most glaring during Donald Trump's campaign. Candidate Trump singled out women for mockery and ridicule. There is a long list of those he tried to disparage. Prominent among them: Carly Fiorina, Megan Kelly, Heidi Cruz, Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Senator Elizabeth Warren and his election opponent Hillary Clinton.

Trump went out of his way to scorn women's words, slamming their intelligence, skills, stamina and even their physical attributes. He seemed preoccupied with bodily fluids, an obsession that ought to be grist for a psychological study. Does he have unresolved mother issues?

What passed as operating procedure for Donald Trump apparently has served as a permission slip for some of his fellow countrymen. Other prominent actors have adopted putdowns of women as a standard template.

In February, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell gaveled down Massachusetts Senator Elizabeth Warren during a confirmation hearing for Attorney General Jeff Sessions. He forced a Senate vote silencing Warren when she tried to read a letter written by Civil Rights Leader Coretta Scott King. (King had opposed Session's appointment to a federal judgeship, based on his sorry civil rights record.) Later McDonnell allowed two of Warren's male colleagues to read from that same letter.

The outrages continue. During Senate hearings in June, California Sen. Kamala Harris was interrupted twice, by her male colleagues. Senators John McCain and Richard Burr teamed up to silence Harris. When Harris asked why Attorney General Jeff Sessions had withheld details of conversations with President Trump, she was hushed and scolded. Later she was chastised during questioning of Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, asking about his support for Special Counsel Robert Mueller. Afterwards she was described as “hysterical.”

What passes for unfair treatment of women in politics and in the hallowed walls of Congress has been mirrored at tech companies and Fortune 500 businesses. Sociological studies make it clear that being interrupted, talked over or shut down is nearly a universal experience for women when they are outnumbered by men.

One recent incident was reported by publisher Arianna Huffington, an Uber board member. After she urged the board to increase the number of women, Uber director David Bonderman ridiculed Huffington's proposal. He protested that adding another woman would only lead to “more talking.” Adverse reaction to his sexist remarks finally led to Bonderman's resignation.

Even in companies without notorious “bro”-cultures, women have had to struggle to feel heard. They have had to fight for advancement. Almost every woman who has any degree of power knows how it feels to experience gender imbalances, to endure mansplaining and the feeling of marginalization.

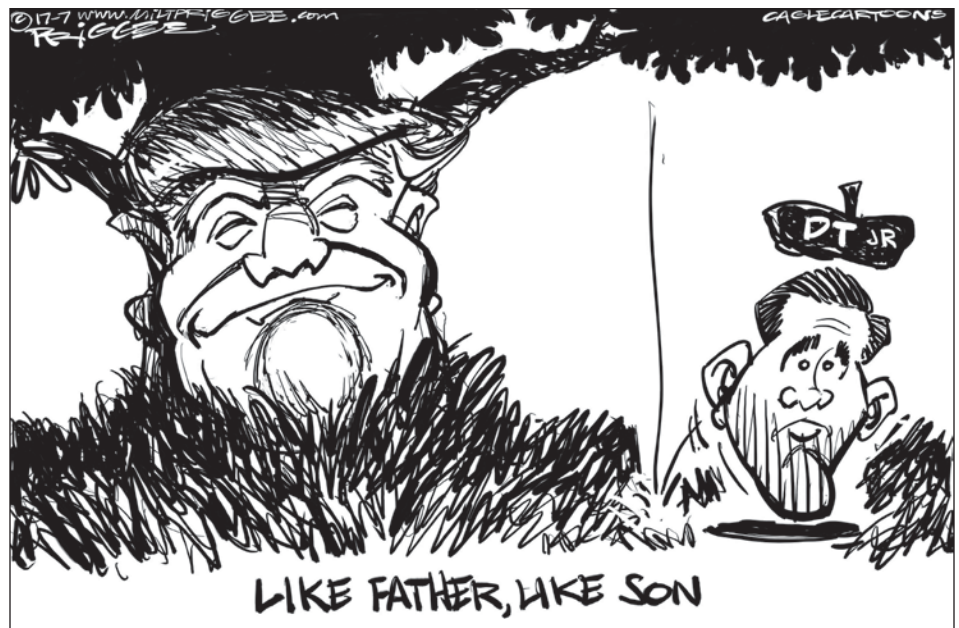

Widespread awareness of this unfair playing field is fueling the success of “Wonder Woman,” the movie. Diana Prince (played by Gal Gadot) is the female superhero that we have long awaited. Anytime we see women in powerful roles onscreen it gives us a lift and an incentive to set things right in the world of reality.

Next time we hear of women being shushed, we should unite and insist on hearing what is being suppressed. We should join those who celebrated Elizabeth Warren's example. Mitch McConnell's unwitting words—“Nevertheless she persisted”—have become a rallying cry.

We should think back to childhood days of “being seen and not heard.” We must support those who want to increase women's influence in business, tech and politics. Like the fictional hero Wonder Woman, there are strong women today working to counter the silencing. We want them to bat down double standards with their silver bracelets, persist and say: Step back bros and let me finish.”
